Decent game until a little ways through when they decide to punish you for every click that doesn't create a match. Then the game just becomes tedious and annoying. Plenty of other ways they could've ramped up the difficulty.. A cool little story driven game. Has its flaws. English translation isn't very accurate but it's still understandable.

Once you get the hang of it , game becomes much better.

Puzzles are good.

Give it a go. Small price for a experience like this.. this is a very cool puzzle game! but i do not recommend you buy this game if you own a potato pc like me. Therefore, i can not give a thumbs up.. This game is just amazing.. the different choices too make actually have affect on the story, in many games, the outcome is always the same, but this game makes you feel like you have control over what to happen, also the story in this game is great, its a way to enjoy for hours and a great time killer!. Beautifully made retro-Zelda-like game, with a female lead, and some family-friendly humour.

I came across this on /r/NintendoSwitch and have bought it to show my support for the developers bringing the game to the Switch.

I'd also like to give respect to the developer for releasing a nice little demo to play before buying, it help solidify my decision to support it.

Great to also see seamless controller support as I grabbed my DS4 already paired from some earlier gaming (DS4Tool) to find it just works instantly and the icons show the relevent Xbox pad buttons instead ofthe Keyboard keys.

So in case it's not clear, PLEASE PORT THIS TO NINTENDO SWITCH, it's the perfect form factor for pick up and play of this great little game!. Super Ledgehop was quite a fun experience.

The OST was great and I can't wait to hear it again on more playthroughs. The fact that the beat of the OST ties into the gameplay was a really interesting concept to me, and I think it was pulled off well. The absorb and reflect feature was a welcome addition to the standard bullet hell concept. The gameplay really shines especially in the multiple boss fights throughout the game. You have to make use of the game's mechanics to find out ways to take out your enemy efficiently and take the least amount of damage.

The level design was nothing too inspiring as it was a normal "kill enemies, go here, fight boss" sort of deal. It almost felt like the points in between boss fights were kind of useless, however the fun gameplay does make up for it.

The plot of the game isn't difficult to wrap your head around. It is a generic save the world story.

Now where the game really shines for me is the characters, and more specifically their interactions. The dialogue between everyone was always interesting and a pleasure to see. The comedic moments aren't something that should be overlooked in this game. It was also able to pull off serious moments aswell, which was nice. The character designs we're pretty alright for what they were and served their purpose.

My main complaint of the game is that it's too short and there's basically no character progression/level ups. However, I think the shortness of the game can help towards potential speedruns (and achievements).

Overall I had a pretty good time playing this game for the low price of under a dollar. I look forward to seeing more from these developers!

(and yes I did find out about this game from the deltarune video lol)

spoiler: the hidden area after the hero fight was very unnerving and really well done. i'm definitely invested now

Play alone, in the dark, with headset on! :P. Not a very smart version of backgammon. Master (the highest AI level) is pretty easy to consistently beat. I'd look for something else if you are looking for a solo challenge.

Bliz mode is just silly its still not hard to beat (even with out using the bliz moves) it just feels like the AI is cheating and still can't win.. I'm at a strange place to put this. It's not a bad VN, not at all. The voice acting is pleasant enough, the music is upbeat and cheerful, the character art is well made. The background art is generic and boring, you won't really see anything that isn't generic and kind of samey feeling despite the fact that the characters visit many different places.

In a vein, this feels like a stripped down Go! Go! Nippon with an emphasis on explaining holidays, festivals, and general living rather than historical locations. That said it's nowhere near as detailed and the main character comes off as a total dweeb half the time.

It could have been kinetic as the choices truly don't matter and the effort you're given for pursuing one girl or another is a few lines of changed text and a zoomed in picture of whichever girl you were after at the end. That's pretty much it. It is one of the laziest ways they could have handled not being a kinetic novel and I think it was done purely so they could avoid the stigma attached with it.

Anywho, despite being generic and being a lesser clone of Go! Go!, it was enjoyable for what it was. It was a good time waster if nothing else.. Amazing and addictive game. For 5 bucks you definitely get your money's worth.. I grew up with a forest for my backyard. In this forest there were elaborate bike trails, pre-US civil war graves, voodoo ritual areas that had seen periodic use, an abandoned but still functioning liquor distillery, and a makeshift bomb shelter. Also animals that would frequently engage in tank combat.

I feel kind of ripped off by this forest not living up to the billing of "crazy" that I grew up with.. This game is good, but it's sad about the fate of the town.. suuuuper creepy game. I love it. 10/10
